NOKESVILLE 4-H CLUB CAMPING PROJECT

BY 4-H'ER MICHAEL DEROCHE

Dear Prince William 4-H,

This past weekend, I helped lead a 4-H camping trip at C.M. Crockett Park, right on Germantown Lake. The site was peaceful, with the lake just a few steps away from where we camped.

Saturday morning started when Ms. Shaelyn and Mr. Shawn arrived with Jax, Joie, and Alanyia. I introduced the group to the weekend goals - like practicing Leave No Trace, learning outdoor skills, and spending time in nature - and then we walked over to our campsite. We had a surprise ready for Ms. Shaelyn: a "Happy Birthday" sign stretched between two trees and a box of donuts. Everyone sang, and it set a great tone for the day.

Ms. Shaelyn showed us a rope activity that demonstrated how everything in nature is interconnected. After that, we did a quick trash pickup around the area as a community service project. Even though we weren't the ones who made the mess, it felt good to leave the area cleaner than we found it.

A little later, Ms. Kristin, Katie, and Nate arrived and jumped in to help. Ms. Kristin led a lesson on how to set up a tent - something everyone should know, even if they weren't staying overnight. It was a great hands-on learning moment.

Then Kaitlynn and her dad, Mr. Tommy, joined us, and we all went out on the lake for canoeing. Some kids were unsure at first, but everyone gave it a try, and it ended up being a fun way to see the lake from a different angle.

When we got back to camp, Kaitlynn and I gathered fire-starting materials and talked about the fire triangle - heat, oxygen, and fuel. We practiced striking sparks with flint and steel until one finally caught and the fire started to grow. Getting that first flame felt like a win.

For dinner, Kaitlynn cut baby potatoes and mixed them with olive oil, garlic, salt, and pepper. I made mine whole with my own seasoning and a sprig of dill. We wrapped them in foil and set them over the coals while we prepped the marinated meat. Everything cooked over the fire came out amazing - especially the potatoes, which were even better the next morning.

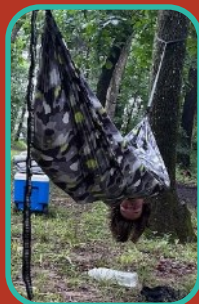

Later in the evening, Ms. Shaelyn's family came back with Ryan and his mom, Ms. Sydney. We sat around the fire, made s'mores, and the kids put on an impromptu bubble show. We took a short walk as a group through the woods at dusk. When we came back, our campsite was lit up with fireflies. The kids ran around trying to catch them while the adults hung back and watched. It was one of those moments you don't forget - it just felt calm and kind of unreal in the best way.

As the night went on, clouds rolled in and a storm started building. I had set up my own tarp and hammock earlier and was planning to sleep there. But I forgot to bring my sleeping bag, and when the temperature dropped, I decided to head into the tent with my mom and grandpa. We stayed up watching the lightning flash and listening to the rain. It was actually kind of perfect.

The next morning we slept in, and when we woke up, the lake was covered in mist. We made hot chocolate and coffee and had leftover potatoes and meat for breakfast. Everything tasted even better the next day.

Later on, Mr. Tommy, Ms. Jennifer, and Kaitlynn came back with cornbread for our potluck lunch. It drizzled a little, but we still grilled burgers and hot dogs, toasted the buns, and kept the fire going. Kaitlynn and I tried a bit more fishing, and before we packed up, I showed her a few goofy hammock tricks that got everyone laughing.

We didn't get to every part of our original plan, knot tying will have to wait for another opportunity, and some things didn't go how we expected. But that's part of what this trip taught me. You can't control the weather. You can't control who shows up or when things shift. But you can control your attitude. That's something I've learned through 4-H—being flexible, staying positive, and making the most of what you've got. Whether it was figuring out how to cook burgers with soggy wood or adjusting plans when people had to leave, we kept things going. It wasn't perfect, but it was meaningful - and I'm proud of what we made of it.

WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, TOO!

You put all four 4-H Pillars into ACTION.
