Document Context:

The Bill of Rights was written after the Revolutionary War in 1791. It is a very special part of the Constitution, and it is the highest law in the United States. Its purpose was to protect citizens of the new United States and to ensure the government knew what it could and could not do to the people. Several of the members of the first Congress wanted to ensure certain liberties and rights were protected.

The first ten amendments to the United States Constitution make up the Bill of Rights. James Madison wrote these ten amendments in response to calls from several states representatives for greater constitutional protection for individual liberties. Rights are freedoms that people deserve. Liberties are a right or privilege; that one is free within society from unfair limitations forced by authority on one's way of life, behavior, or political views.

The Bill of Rights was strongly influenced by the Virginia Declaration of Rights written by George Mason. Other documents that influenced the Constitution include English documents such as the Magna Carta, the Petition of Right, the English Bill of Rights, and the Massachusetts Body of Liberties.

Exercise:

Read the Bill of Rights. Discuss what each means and then list all amendments in order with their correct descriptions and examples.

Secondly, open up the topic for deeper discussion. For instance, if and how these amendments are still relevant today. What differs now from when they were written in the United States? Do they apply to all citizens of the United States? Why or Why not? Do they need modification? (There are no wrong answers to these questions.)
